One Willimantic pitcher wilted and another batted to bulge out the Norwich batting averages at Norwich park on Tuesday afternoon before a crowd of mid-week proportions. Everything looked alike to the Norwich stickers when hits were needed for runs, producing a while Willimantic was collecting 2. The victory over Willimantic jumped Norwich out of last place in the league standing and

The game started as a duel between the two left-handers, Mooney of Norwich and Thomas of Willimantic, but Thomas early showed wildness and gave up the struggle after he had passed one in the second inning, and three Norwich batters had peeled off singles. Manley succeeded him, but was hit in the second inning, when the home team got their bats to swinging again, driving in four runs on a pass, four singles, and a sacrifice on which the squeeze was worked.

A fielding feature that put a rosy tint on the afternoon's festivities was pulled off by Centerfielder Monahan in the fifth when he choked off a Willimantic rally by racing way back, grabbing the ball over his shoulder, then hitting it to Rhylander, who sent it to Duff to complete the play that doubled Campion and Manley.

Timely hitting by Norwich made the best afternoon of bat work they have had in two weeks. Priel was on deck with a perfect average, a pass and three singles in four times. Chapdelaine was the first to produce a timely hit, bringing in Priel in the second. Noonan produced a wallop that scored Chap after Mooney fanned. In the third it was Joe Priel who rapped

COLLEGE CATCHER.
Middletown Had
McCus Was Edward John McCaffrey, a Freshman at Wesleyan—May Hurt His Amateur Standing.

It looks as if Edward John McCaffrey, a freshman at Wesleyan university, the catcher for the varsity team, is in "bad" from an amateur standpoint. This is because McCaffrey went to Norwich when Middletown last played there and caught a game for the Middletown team of the Connecticut association in a contest with Norwich, says the Middletown Penny Press.

Just what effect this will have on the amateur standing of McCaffrey is a matter of some interest. McCaffrey caught the game out of friendship for Frank Johnson, who wanted to be absent. Axel Anderson, who has been catching for the Middletown team, was canned on Saturday and the only way to get some one to take his place behind the bat. He asked McCaffrey to do the catching for the Middletown team and McCaffrey out of friendship did so. He appeared in the lineup under the name of McCus. No one seemed to know who McCus was, and when inquiries were made it came out that Eddie McCaffrey was the boy who was handling Harry's shoots in the Rose of New England last Sunday. Johnson went out of town looking for a pair of horses to replace those recently drowned.

Already the question has been raised as to the effect of the catching of this game will have on the amateur standing of McCaffrey. The fact that McCaffrey was a Wesleyan mainstay the past season and who was good for three years more in the same position, as it is not often that freshmen make the varsity team in any position.

McCaffrey has a brother who is playing with the Fordham team, oth have distinguished themselves on the diamond this season. McCaffrey's home is in Dorchester, Mass.

KEEP CATCHER THROWING.
Clark Griffith Has Some Cute Ideas About Base-Running.

"I think I am on the right road," said Clark Griffith recently. "This base-running thing is bound to win, and I'm going to keep the boys at it. While their legs are good. Get the other fellows throwing, and you can do a lot of tricks with them. Of course there are times when discretion must be used. I don't recommend headlong base-stealing when Killee or Archer is up there behind the pan. They might get even Beescher too often to be enjoyable. Beescher's a catcher, and it pays to keep 'em throwing."

This is the present status of the attacking part of baseball: base-running has been so subordinated of recent years that the infielders don't know how to deal with a lot of fast men plunging at them all the time. They don't know what to do when a man after man, instead of waiting to be batted around, comes charging down the line. Catchers throw uncertainly. Infielders take the throwers around like catfish. You can steal all the time if you only have a little nerve. The spiking of infielders, which is largely the result of uncertainty and clumsiness. In the old days, when men were stealing all the time, the basemen were clever as cats, and real wonders, both at taking the runners and dodging them. Nowadays the infielders don't know how to handle them. They go over the base in a clumsy fashion and get spiked by the runners instead of being to one side collecting the men as they arrive. Look at the scores and stories of the old game; you will see that more base-runners used to hurt than infielders. Seldom was a basemen spiked—if anyone got damaged it was a reckless runner getting bunched.

"Since Beescher filled out and got big, he looks more and more like 'Bill' Lange each day. He has the same bulk, the same general make-up, and he runs his bases with the Lange methods and the Lange success. 'Bill' was a wonderful man. He did tricks on the sacker such as few men since his time have dared to do, and he could get by with them to time after time. One thing he did, and often, I think, he was the best at it, was to lay very little coaching on the players. 'Bill' would wait till the catcher was just passing the ball back to the pitcher, and then he would sidle for second, or third, or home, and he would get there before the pitcher, hurried and rattled, would make a wild grab at the ball, turn and chuck way wild to second, while the second baseman, who was rattled, would have to chase the ball, get to the base and fish for the runner. 'Bill' would get it timed to a nicety and could get by with it day after day. The position of finger, what he was coming. If he can learn, even while the pitcher's arm is flashing past his head, what ball is being pitched, he has a tremendous advantage."

"This art of guessing, from what a pitcher already has pitched, what he will pitch, is a strange one. Last summer, for my own amusement, I evolved a test, which was tried by five different clubs with exactly the same results. It consisted of giving half a dozen players in each team to guess as to having them match heads and tails. The result was always the same, the best pitcher and the best batter always thought it out for position of the pennies. In a test made with seven of the Pittsburgh and Detroit players, the result repeatedly was that Clarke and Wagner, who were the best guessers, were pitching to him. The others had cultivated the habit of figuring from what had been done what would be done."
